Gymnastics, friendship & fun

Teasing & Tumbling

They laugh, joke, and even flirt a bit during the hour-long gymnastics class for the developmentally disabled.

And sometimes they practice gymnastics.

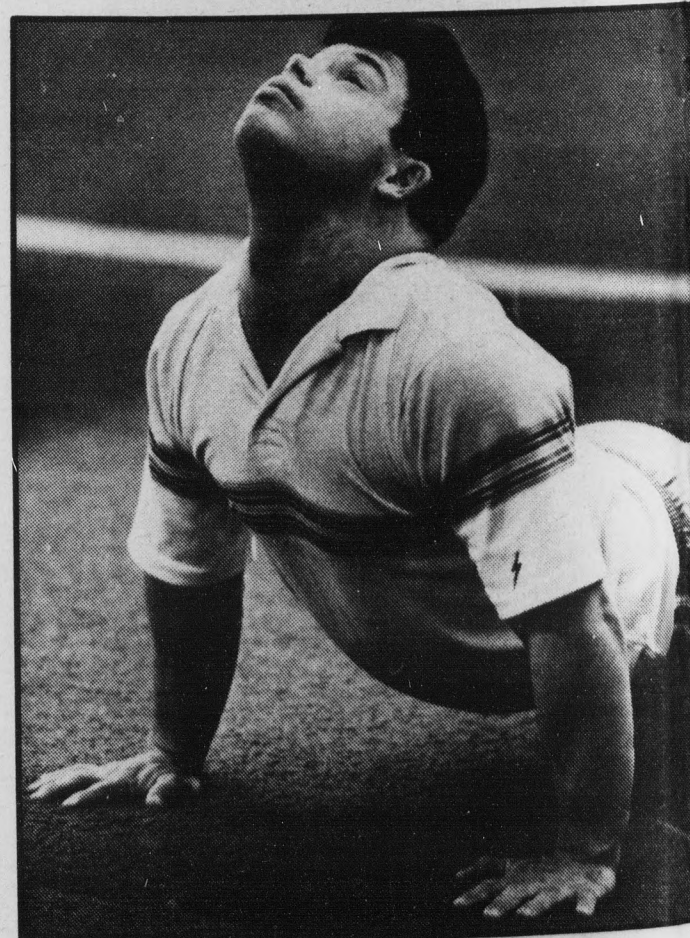

Teasing and tumbling may seem an odd combination, but it's a formula that works for Upland instructor Vicki Storti, 33.

Despite the course title, gymnastics is merely a conduit for friendship and fun in the Monday night class sponsored by the Upland Recreation Department.

"There isn't a lot of (good-natured) teasing, joking and playing in their world," said Storti, referring to people contorted by Downs Syndrome and other disabilities. Sometimes society laughs at these people instead of laughing with them, she said.

Simple forward rolls are applauded and praised in a class where success is measured by effort, a class where "everyone is a winner."

The sessions begin on a rug-covered mat where Storti leads her trio of students through some stretching exercises.

"Roll your shoulders; relax your arms," says Storti.

The youths roll their outstretched arms in small circles that inevitably grow wider, until their arms are flailing in every direction.

"Allen, you're gonna take off if you don't stop," says Storti, chiding 14-year-old Allen Lai.

Storti sprinkles her instruction with a few commands, jokes and a some confessions about eating too much over the holidays.

After assuring Storti that she is not fat, the giggling students practice the finer points of a forward roll.

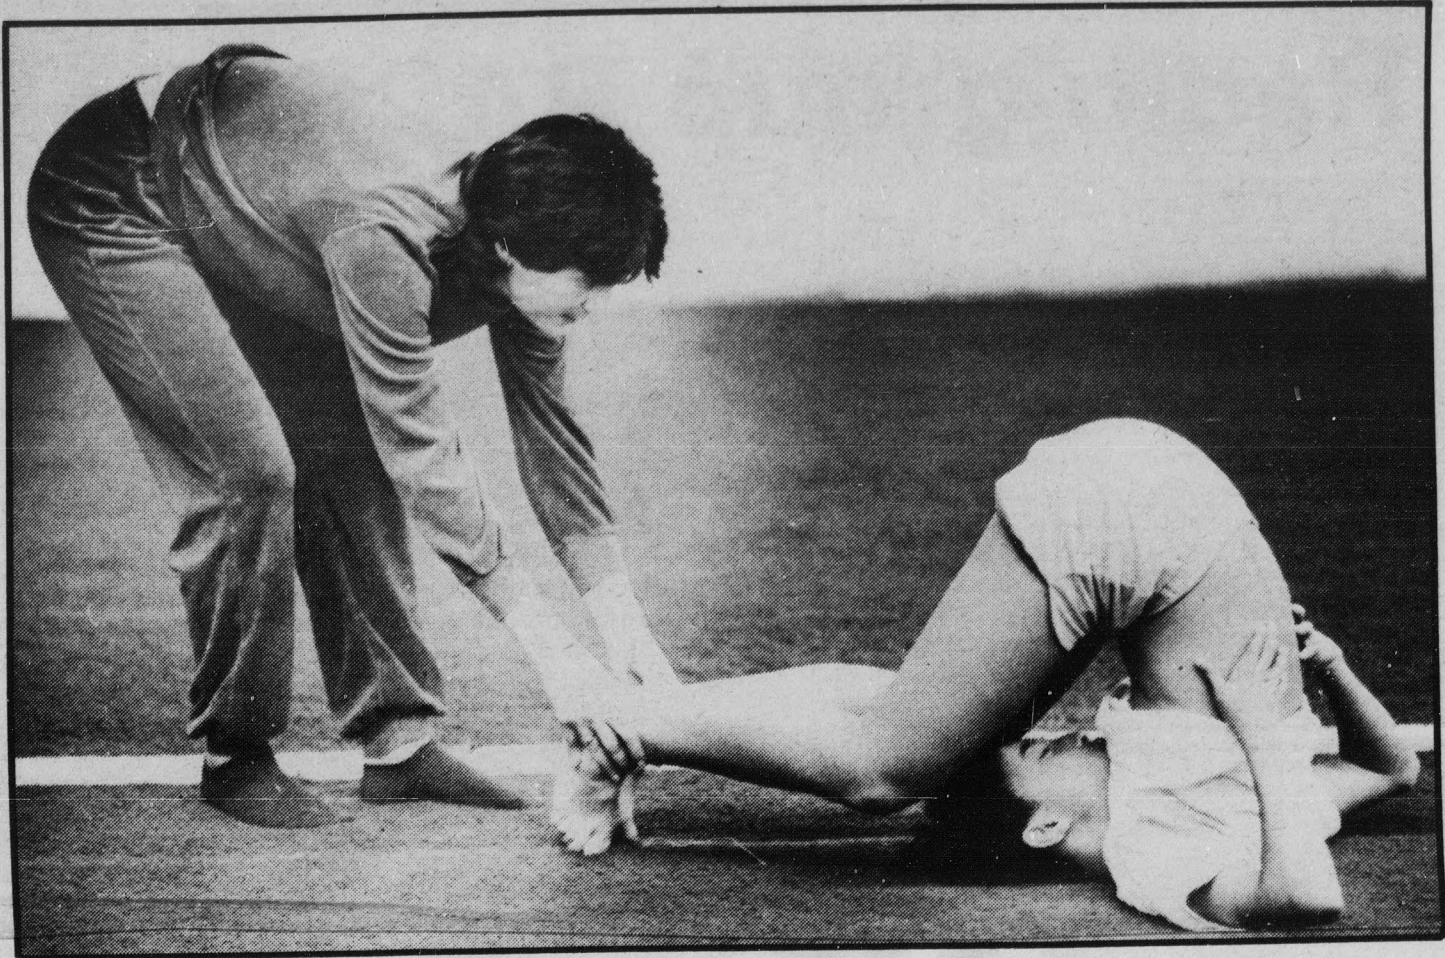

J.D. Spinella, 21, of Upland has trouble keep his legs straight and ends a roll with a sigh of frustration and a questioning glance to his teacher.

A victim of Downs Syndrome, Spinella later forgot part of his freestyle routine and walked off the mat muttering, "It must be I'm done."

Spinella's stocky frame is as pliable as putty and his wit is quick and biting.

"When he started, he was just bull strength and awkwardness," recalls his mother, Margaret.

After hearing the click of a camera while he fumbled through a routine on the bi-level bars, Spinella lumbers up to a photographer, shrugs his shoulders in explanation and says: "I goofed."

There's no shame, no embarrassment.

While improving their strength, endurance and relaxation, Storti has bolstered their confidence.

Emotional, physical or intellectual handicaps lose their grip on the student's self-image.

Fourteen-year-old Vikki Brown doesn't speak. But she smiles a lot.

She smiles as she prepares to walk, sway and dip across the balance beam.

She smiles when she teeters and almost falls. And she smiles when she successfully completes the routine.

Compared to a "normal" gymnast, Vikki's victory is small. But her successes aren't measured on the mat or the balance beam.

Her battle is with silence.

"She talks and tends to communicate more in this class," says Storti, whose numerous commands of "point your toes" and "keep your legs straight" do not go uncontested.

The session ends with an inevitable challenge from the students: "Now, it's your turn." □

Lai gets some help in straightening out his legs (top photo) during stretching exercises. The coaching and encouragement pays off (above) in the final solo routine by 14-year-old Allen Lai.

Radio group RACES to the rescue

By Terri Tirella

There's an earthquake. Everyone is stunned, damage is high and many people are hurt — some with minor cuts and bruises, others with more serious injuries.

The telephone system, like all other utilities, is down; fires are raging, trees have fallen, roadways are blocked and there's no way to contact authorities for help.

Don't despair.

RACES, Radio Amateur Civil Emergency Service, is ready for almost any situation — even catastrophic occurrences like an earthquake.

The volunteer organization has geared itself to help local emergency agencies — including police and fire departments, the American Red Cross, hospitals and ambulance services — in times of trouble.

But the group knows its limits.

"Police and fire department officials don't want us doing their work and we don't want to. We are extra eyes and ears throughout the area, letting them know where there is damage or where help is needed," Tony Petrone said. Petrone, a resident of Upland, is district coordinator for the communities of Upland, Rancho Cucamonga, Ontario, Chino and Mount Baldy.

The RACES program died out soon after it began in the 1940s. But interest was revived during the Panorama fire in the San Bernardino Mountains. The organization has been growing in Petrone's district ever since.

Still, the program met with resistance in some quarters at first.

"It has taken a while to get acceptance from police and fire officials. They were reluctant to work with a citizens group not trained to their standards. We may not be trained, but we're damn good communicators," he said.

According to Thomas Markley, RACES San Bernardino County chief, the West Valley organization is growing by leaps and bounds.

"We have established better contacts and liaisons with public safety agencies and have entered into programs with blood banks and hospitals to provide them with communication during disasters," he said.

"During disasters when telephones are out we help provide extra communication. Hospitals can't talk to the fire department, and the fire department can't talk to the police said.

Members of RACES are amateur radio operators who must be licensed by the Federal Communications Commission. According to Petrone, local participants include people from all walks of life. The youngest ham radio operator is 5 years old.

"The fire department has only four radio channels: One is countywide, two are mutual aid and the last is for their area," Petrone said. During an extensive emergency, the channels are frequently tied up with communication traffic throughout the area.

When an emergency is at hand, RACES volunteers check in with their base station.

"The network control operator will acknowledge them and will direct them to certain channels. We have 800 channels," Petrone said.

From network control will come smaller, individual networks, with volunteer radio operators communicating with other agencies through their smaller network's controller.

For example, one network would use a channel to coordinate ambulance service throughout the emergency area, directing the vehicles to critically injured people. If more ambulances were needed, the ambulance "net" controller would radio the network control operator, usually located at the fire stations, who can then inform the battalion where help is needed.

RACES has played an active role in community emergency preparedness drills, according to Peter Bryan, Upland Fire Department Division chief.

"In the last drills, they communicated injury information from the scene to the hospital. We use them to survey damage of buildings before we get there. A major drill is planned for May or June which may include several agencies and hospitals, and maybe as many as 100 injuries," the fire official said.

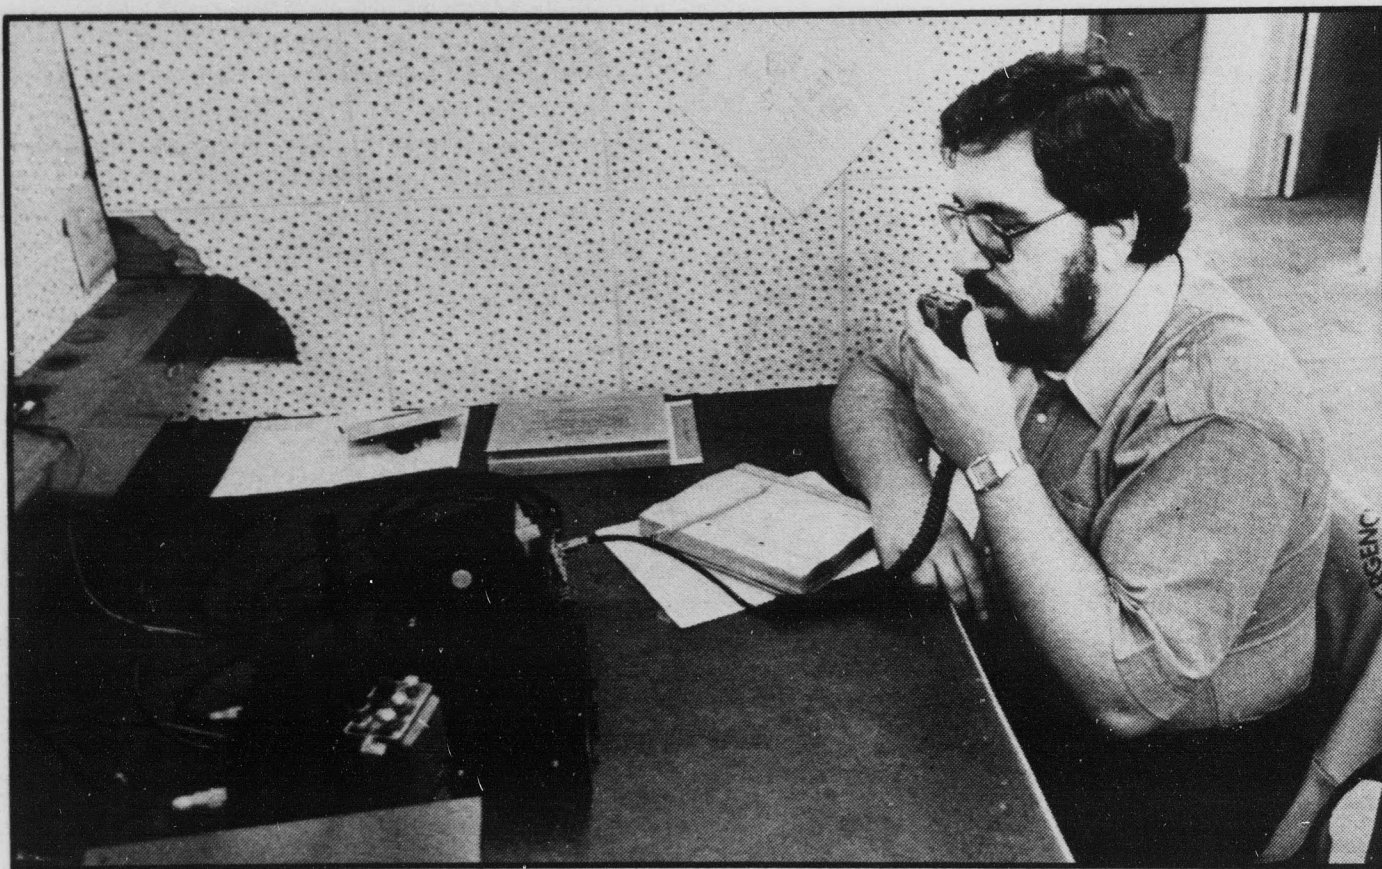

RACES has also acted in real emergencies, including the flooding that occurred last March. According to Donna Shellenbarger, American Red Cross representative, RACES volunteers usually set up a radio station in the Red Cross office, with roving stations reporting to the base during disasters.

"We're working on setting up a radio command station for RACES in our communication facility," she said. The Red Cross has the same trouble as fire departments. It has assigned frequencies shared with Red Cross units throughout Southern California, which are overloaded during areawide emergency situations.

"We're (the Red Cross) mainly responsible for finding shelter and food for people who are left homeless during disasters. We record what families are where, and if someone is looking for another family member we can communicate with the shelter through a radio volunteer and they can report back to us," she said.

RACES delivers messages from the main office to Red Cross shelters and lets the base station know what supplies are needed.

Swedish students (l-r) Peter Dobers, Lotta Nyqvist and Tina Johansson said they are enjoying their stay in California as part of the Sweden-California International Academy exchange program. Dobers and Nyqvist attend Upland High School and live with the Ed Pierce family in that city. Johansson is living with SCIA representative Jim Branch and his family in Alta Loma. Anyone interested in the program, either as an exchange student or host family, may call Branch at 987-9534.

Swedish exchange program seeks hosts

By Terri Tirella

Host families are being sought by the Sweden-California International Academy to house Swedish exchange students in the West Valley.

"The Sweden-California International Academy has been active five years and is now branching out to Colorado, New York and Florida," Alta Loma resident Jim Branch said. Branch is an SCIA area representative.

The exchange program limits itself to American students going to Sweden and Swedish students coming to California.

Currently SCIA has 70 Swedish students in Southern California. Those living with local families include Tina Johansson in Alta Loma and Lotta Nyqvist and Peter Dobers, who have joined the Ed

Pierce family in Upland.

"It doesn't seem like many American students want to go to Sweden," Branch said. "I hand out flyers at all the schools but get little response."

Students between the ages of 15 and 17 can apply to the program. American students are given initial language instruction followed up by an extensive language camp in Sweden to eliminate basic language problems.

"English is a compulsory course for seven years for Swedish students, so almost all students speak English fluently, as do most instructors. So there shouldn't be a big language problem for American students," Branch said.

Both American and Swedish students are placed as soon as possible so families can write and establish contact with their new family member. "We send pictures and get acquainted with each other. Our family called Tina on her birthday and woke her up," Branch said. The 17-year-old student lives with Branch and his family in Alta Loma.

It is unusual to place two students with one family, as has been done with the Pierce family in Upland. "For some reason, Peter's family pulled out so the Pierces took both students," he said.

Visiting students choose SCIA because they want to know where in the U.S. they'll be living. Host families choose the group because they are guaranteed to receive a Swedish student and don't have to wonder where their soon-to-be family member is from, according to Branch.

CHURCHES

The Rock makes inroads in R.C.

By Terri Tirella

Ray Gonzales had one dream as a youth growing up in Rancho Cucamonga's tough North Town. He had to get out.

At the first available opportunity, Gonzalez left the barrio, got married and put his past behind him.

Today Ray Gonzalez is back but he's no longer just of Ray. He's Pastor Ray and he wants to put something back into the community he once thought he had left for good.

What brought Gonzalez back? The Rock.

The Rock has two meanings for Gonzalez. It's the church he leads at the corner of Center Avenue and 25th Street and it's the God he serves. Jesus is referred to as the Rock in the Apostle Paul's first letter to the Corinthians.

"I grew up in this town as a young man. All I ever wanted to do then was leave this place," he recalled. "Three years later I became a Christian and God directed us back here."

The church began as a small outreach program and has solidified into a rock of commitment for Christians devoted to serving the area's street youth in Rancho Cucamonga's North Town area.

It was initiated by a Lutheran congregation at King of Glory Church about 10 years ago but became a separate, non-denominational entity in the eyes of the government six years ago.

"God wanted us to do this, to be here. Before, there was a lot of violence and bloodshed in the area. It was a really small beginning and now there are almost 200 people on Sunday," the pastor said.

"We have people here who have done time in prison, several men have broken laws, committed murder, but God has transformed them by his power," he said.

For Gonzalez, he gets commitment from others who have grown up under tough circumstances. These people also want to make a difference and because of similar backgrounds to North Town's street youths Gonzalez thinks they may be able to better understand his congregation.

The outreach workers initially rented an old store for Friday night meetings. "The man who owned the store wanted to help kids from the street. During that time we were young Christians wanting to share the word of God. We had guests speakers from Teen Challenge and a man who was with the Mafia," Gonzalez said.

Many people joining the Rock's flock had a religious background, but according to Gonzalez told him they felt 'empty.' "It's not us doing it (converting or fulfilling them) it's God's presence ... religion in itself is empty.

"You need Jesus in your life, you need the presence of love."

The church hasn't suffered the vandalism, graffiti or burglaries typical of barrios, said Gonzalez. "The young people respect the premises. They have never written on the walls. We're not here to tell them what to do, but to help them and minister to them. They see this but maybe don't understand fully. We have seen a decline in violence."

Bible studies are held weekly. Women's Bible studies are held Tuesdays at 10 a.m.; men meet at the same time. Families meet for Bible study Wednesday evenings at 7 and Bible studies are also held in homes.

Gonzales said the Rock congregation leans towards Pentecostal beliefs. "We desire to go back to the Book of Acts and have the same power believers had then to make miracles, the same love of God flowing through his people."

"We see a lot of good things happening in the lives of people. We see the power of God mending their lives — we hope things keep going that way. God's people should help one another."

Anita Gonzalez said she thought her husband was "a little crazy" when he began his ministry.

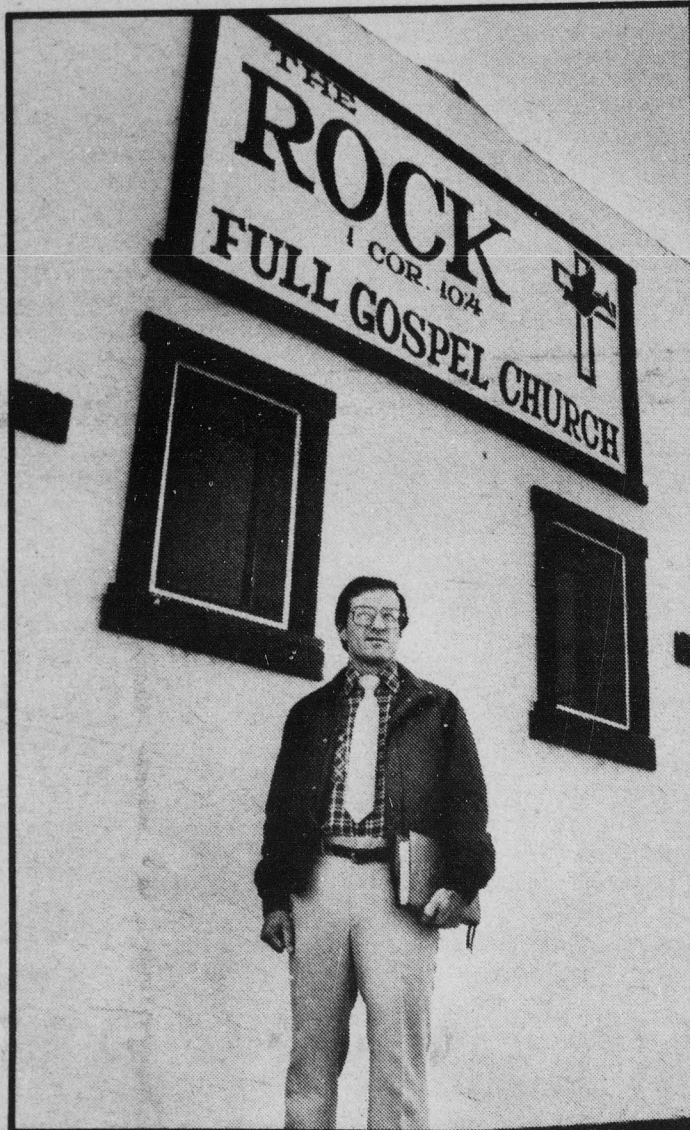

"I didn't understand; I had never lived a religious life. I wanted to be a better person and to stop living a life that was leading nowhere," she said.

"I opened my heart and He came into my life and I see the whole world differently," she said.

She and Gonzalez opened their home to teenagers, who know the minister as Pastor Ray. "Some of them have turned to the Lord; others at least have the seed planted in their hearts," Mrs. Gonzalez said.

Having Gonzalez give up his full-time job to become a minister was a difficult decision to make. "There we were with no steady paycheck coming in, but we decided that we're not stopping, we won't stop striving. Sometimes we have needs, sometimes things are important, sometimes they are not," she said.

Services are held Sunday, 9:30 a.m. and 6 p.m. For information, call or visit the Rock, 10289 25th St., Rancho Cucamonga, 987-1365.

LIVING ALONE

The shape of the American household is changing: One lifestyle on the rise is the man or woman living alone. Whether you live alone by choice or by virtue of circumstance, it can be an exciting opportunity to find out who you really are as an adult. There are some pitfalls, of course; here's how to avoid them:

Resist the tendency to regard your situation as temporary. Don't put off decorating or stocking the refrigerator. Even if you are living alone you deserve a real home.

Treat yourself well. Don't get in the habit of eating dinner out of a can standing by the counter because there is no one else there.

Don't confuse "aloneness" with "loneliness". It may take some practice to learn to be comfortable with your own company.

Impose some minimal structure on your life. One of the beauties of living alone can be the freedom to do what you want when you want, but the absence of external demands can be disorganizing. It may be a good idea to schedule mealtimes, exercise time, bedtime, etc.

Plan ahead. If you tend to have unexpected bouts of loneliness, keep your social calendar filled.

GLANCING BACK

Hydro-electric power to the people

By John H. Nicholson

In our snooping along, up San Antonio Canyon, we had gotten as far as that narrow spot called the Hogsback. A hydro-electric power plant had been installed at the foot of the high falls there.

William G. Kerckhoff had become a leader on hydro-electric power in several parts of California. In 1901, he headed a group that purchased the plants in San Antonio Canyon. He also acquired about 55 acres of canyon bottom and slopes a little north of the Hogsback obstacle, a final barrier to wagon traffic.

Early users of the canyon, beyond, had to use pack animals to get supplies to their projects. The pack trail over the solid rock at Hogsback was hazardous and accidents were frequent. Then, Mr. Kerckhoff blasted a crude roadway over the obstacle. Many horse drawn wagons strained and finally made it, but others wound up as wreckage at the canyon bottom.

As time went by, the canyon bottom road was improved, and finally paved. But the stiff pull over Hogsback was a real test for autos. Anyone who pulled the grade in high gear could crow far louder than those who simply made it over Dawson's Hill.

As the present Mt. Baldy high road goes over Hogsback, it dips down briefly. At the bottom of the dip, a private side road leads across the creek. It leads eastward, into Barrett's Canyon. More than a dozen homes are located there.

A flood in 1969 demolished two homes and a fire in 1980 claimed seven others. The road into Barrett's is narrow and hazardous, and casual visitors are advised to stay out.

When it could be reached by wagons, Mr. Kerckhoff established the Kerckhoff Ranch on his 55 acres and built a fine ten-room home. It is now the Wingate Ranch, and cattle and horses roam there. It is fenced and posted and is the home and private property of the Wingate family and trespassing, even along the streambed, is discouraged.

As we drive on north, skirting the fences of the Wingate Ranch, we climb another long and rather steep grade. This is known as the Kerckhoff Grade. As we top it, we begin to enter today's community of Mt. Baldy Village.

As the terrain flattened out a little there, it was a promising area. In 1886, a visionary fellow started Dell's Camp there. It was about where the Mt. Baldy Trout Pools are now. It became a good spot for vacationers and for those with operations upstream to relax, recuperate and resupply.

In 1906, an area at about the center of the present village, became Baynham's Camp. It offered more than Dell's Camp and prospered. Later, the area became known as Camp Baldy. "Old Timers," like me, find it difficult to drop that name and call it Mt. Baldy Village.

For years, now, there have been many permanent homes in the village, in nearby Bear Canyon and on north in the main canyon, about 300 homes in all. There seems to be several reasons for living there, such as at least partial seclusion (unless there is snow), lack of suburban clamor (but if there is promise of snow, the suburbanites arrive and bring plenty of clamor), a rustic setting, better air to breathe, possible winter sports outside the door, small community chumminess and others.

The village has a good elementary school and a variety of businesses which can add to the visitor's enjoyment. With due caution, one can tour the narrow byways and see where these mountain folks love to live. Many of them commute to jobs in the valley below.

A few hundred yards above the village and its public (but not for free) trout pools, a flattish valley on the right, is the Chapman Ranch. It, too, is quite private to uninvited folks. Established in 1930, it now has a number of interesting features. You can at least hear about them, here. There is a sawmill and all of the buildings on the ranch are of lumber milled there. Occasionally, a fallen tree may be available from nearby, but otherwise logs are hauled from elsewhere. There is a fine garden, a forge shop, a pottery, a weaving room and beekeeping "Bobbie" Chapman and his family are kept busy with these hobbies. They do invite local

ENJOY YOUR FAMILY

Family life is full of chores, obligations, and aggravations, but it can be rich with pleasure as well. Here's how you can get the most out of your shared lives.

The foundation upon which any happy family is built is a strong, intimate, friendly marriage. Keep the marriage relationship strong by giving it the time and opportunity to grow. Realize that it is to everyone's advantage for you to set limits on children's behavior if you cannot live happily with it. Sitting like a martyr while a four-year-old runs around the table at dinnertime reduces your pleasure in your child and ultimately reduces his happiness more than would the initial "insult" of your stopping that behavior.

Keep in mind how the nature of the family changes. Recognize that it is the children's job to grow away from the family; this allows parents to let go when appropriate, and to resist fighting their children's steps toward autonomy. Remember, the children are at home a relatively brief time. Knowing this helps to lend perspective to problems and to remind parents to treasure even seemingly routine aspects of the time spent together.

school kids in on occasion to share in these activities and to learn by doing.

Around a few more curves in the road, we come to the Ice House Canyon Lodge. It was started in 1919 by the Chapman family, who had lived about half a mile farther back Ice House Canyon. That canyon also contains a number of homes. It reaches eastward, on the back side of Ontario Peak. Trails lead up Ice House, to the top of Ontario and Cucamonga Peaks, but are much too hazardous to use in the winter.

After several more curves, we come to Snow Crest Lodge, with it's "Movie Slope" ski area, Glacier picnic area, Manker Flats Campground and at the road's end, the Mt. Baldy Ski Lift.

In snow times, tire chains are required. Most trails should not be tried in the winter due to icy conditions. Almost yearly, folks become fatalities by taking the risks. Others join them on the way down the canyon, by not controlling auto speeds. Have fun, but use caution and common sense. □

Exchange students compare ways of life

between their school system and what they have found at Upland and Alta Loma High Schools. "Everyone goes to school from age 7 and we graduate after ninth grade to go on to gymnasium," Dobers said.

Students spend as little as one and as many as three years at gymnasium studying specific fields of endeavor such as economics, languages, technical skills or computer programming. "It's similar to our junior college system," Branch said. "Some are like a continuation of our high school, only much more difficult."

The Swedish students study as many as 12 subjects a term, with class meetings varying throughout the week. "You may meet on Monday for 40 minutes and have eight hours of classes; on Tuesdays you might have six hours of classwork," Dobers said.

Dobers, Nyqvist and Johansson agreed schoolwork is easier in California than at home. "It's easier because we can choose what we want to study," Dobers said. "You learn more things like dates by heart in Sweden (and) you have to try to think logically."

"Last week a girl in my class (at Alta Loma High School) didn't know where Canada was. She thought it was a state," Johansson said.

Developing close friendships is another problem the visitors have had to face. "As an exchange student it is more pleasant to be a boy than a girl. American girls are more interested in guys," Dobers said.

He has found a big difference in dating customs. "Couples in Sweden split (money spent on dates); here it's different. I have to pay for everything and you really depend on the car here."

Homecoming was a disappointment to the visiting students. "Weeks before the dance girls were talking about their dresses. When you come to the dance you expect so much," Nyqvist said.

"Being dressed up in that style, you couldn't dance to the music they had," Dobers lamented.

"We don't dress up that much (in Sweden)," Nyqvist added. Girls don't use as much make-up, take as much time curling their hair or fuss with clothes.

Dobers would like to move to the U.S. someday. "There is more of an opportunity here than in Sweden. If you have a good idea and really want to work hard, you have a better chance here than with the government control you find in Sweden."

Amusement parks in Sweden can't compare with those here, either. "We only have two and they are much smaller than any here," Johansson said, although Sweden does have animal parks.

According to the Swedes, the food here is unhealthy. "Our families always have good foods, but you find a lot of junk food here. We like it but it's not healthy."

The students agreed that being on their own in California has matured them. "We've developed more here than we might have at home. We've had to solve our own problems," Dobers said.

Appreciating their parents is another lesson the students have learned since coming here.

"Parents in Sweden are more liberal. There is no spanking and the students act more grown up, more responsible," Branch said.

"Kids here have rules. We stay out later and go and do things at home more. Our parents may give us their opinion, like 'you shouldn't stay out late Sunday because you'll be tired,' but if you do it and you don't have a good time and you're tired Monday morning, that's your problem," Dobers said.

Anyone wishing information on being a host family or an exchange student may call or write Branch: 987-9534 or 6742 Zircon Ave., Alta Loma, 91701. □

Isabel Garcia, owner of Tamales International in Rancho Cucamonga, offers a wide variety of rolled concoctions. There are about 15 different types of tamales made at the restaurant, but those with recipes for other styles will be accommodated if the cook, Isabel's sister Christine, is given enough time.

Tasty, tantalizing tamales take time to get to the table

By Matt Coker

Don't expect a piping hot tamale seconds after ordering at Tamales International, because proprietor Isabel Garcia wants it made clear her restaurant is not a fast-food stand.

It takes time to prepare a made-to-order tamale, she said, and for those who want a taste of the rolled concoction as it is found throughout Mexico and Central and South America, Tamales International, 9000 Foothill Blvd., Rancho Cucamonga, is the place.

There are about 15 different types of tamales made at the restaurant, but those with recipes for other styles will be accommodated if the cook, Isabel's sister Christine, is given enough time.

Christine compared the amount of time it takes to cook a tamale with the wait experienced when ordering a pizza. "You don't just walk in and order one and it's ready," Christine said.

Most tamales made at the restaurant are composed of rolled corn dough stuffed with a variety of fillings and wrapped in corn husks. Four days of work go into getting the corn tamale ready for cooking, which takes another half hour.

But owner Garcia said the restaurant also prepare tamales as they are found in some South American countries — wrapped in banana peels.

The Humita Tamale is from Ecuador, a Pollo (chicken) Tamale is like those found in the Caribbean and others originated in Peru, El Salvador and Columbia.

"Ours are larger than most you find in the stores," said Garcia, who claims her tamales weigh about 8 ounces while most other commercial tamales are no more than 5 ounces.

Some of the treats found at Tamales International are known as "dessert tamales," with coconut, pineapple and raisin fillings. There is even a "Pina Colada Tamale."

Dessert tamales are "great to have with coffee, for breakfast or a snack with ice cream ala mode," Christine said.

Tasty tamales are a treat worth waiting for

Gringos are attracted to the restaurant because the only tamales they have tasted before came out of a can. But the eatery is also a haven for those who thought they left the delicacies behind when they left their south-of-the-border homelands.

"They are excited they could find it (in the United States)," Garcia said of Central and South Americans who wander into the restaurant and find tamales like those at home. "There's not too many places to find it. Sometimes they find someone who makes them at home, but not at restaurants."

Garcia also sells frozen tamales, which can be ordered by the dozen and prepared at home. Whether cooked or frozen, the tamales are discounted by the dozen.

Garcia even has customers who pack frozen tamales in dry ice and ship them out-of-state.

That may be hard to swallow for those still exhausted following holiday meal-making, since tamales are a favorite dish at Thanksgiving and Christmas in many households.

For those who would rather eat out, the restaurant is nicely decorated and features a $1.99 luncheon special.

The Garcia sisters, born in Puerto Rico but raised in Rialto, also cater for fund-raisers, and sell tamales at a discount for such events. They started making tamales at home, but when Isabel discovered the varieties of tamales on a trip through Mexico and Central and South America, the Cal Poly Pomona graduate decided to open her own business.

Hoping to promote her business, she is now setting her sights on a tamale-eating contest at the next Rancho Cucamonga Wine Festival.

But though not as many have found her restaurant as she would like, Garcia is not ready to sell the farm yet.

And once they find Tamales International, they stay, Garcia said with a laugh. □ Casaletti's Polka Palace is rich in history, ethnic music and fun.

Surrounded by open fields in Etiwanda on Highland Avenue, Casaletti's has continued to thrive for more than 37 years in its remote Etiwanda location.

Even now with road work, "road closed" signs and torn up pavement polka lovers still trek to the palace known for its gingham tablecloths and homey atmosphere.

They tease Ann Casaletti, the owner, about extending her parking lot into the earth and rock-hewn road.

"We're sorry for the inconvenience to our customers," Ann said. She explained developers were raising the road before construction of 750 homes. "They have to leave the road open for us."

"They said it would take a couple of weeks, now they're telling us three months," she continued.

She said she is looking forward to new clientele when the development is finished. "This will be our fourth phase of new people. First we had ranchers and orange grove farmers and Italian people from the wineries 'til they got too old."

"Then we started with the Slavic people, Germans, Slovenians and Polish," she said.

Ann and her son Bob run the business, which serves hot lunches and dinners Monday through Thursday from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.; and Friday and Saturday from noon to 1 a.m. Polka music takes over at 9 p.m. on Saturdays. "We close on Sunday because I have to take a day off," she said.

"We have polka dancing every Saturday night from 9 to 1 and we do charge that night, only to help pay the cost of the band," she explained.

Ann does all the cooking for Casaletti's, making spaghetti, cabbage rolls, Polish sausage as dinner specials.

Of Russian descent, Ann was married to her late husband Tillio for 35 years. She continued on in the business after her husband's death 10 years ago.

Development has not always meant a boon in Casaletti's business. "Putting in the (Devore) freeway took more people off the highway," she said. But instead of being secluded "it won't be long before I'll be in the middle of the city with 750 homes, buildings planned for schools and parks."

Casaletti's once had classes for beginners, but no longer offers them. "If people demanded classes, we'd start them again," Ann said.

The polka palace used to be on a 40-acre ranch. "It started as a fruit stand, then it was a bar. My mother-in-law put in dancing then we put in the polka palace. My son is helping me now; he's the third generation," Ann said.

It's a big happy family at Casaletti's on Saturday night. Customers drive from as far as Santa Ana, Gardena and Long Beach to join in the polka merriment.

"We have all nice people, always happy. We never have trouble here," she said.

"It's a very homey atmosphere. Our customers get acquainted with us and feel at home," she said.

Bob's college and university pennant collection, along with bowling trophies add to the home-like atmosphere.

Both Ann and Bob are active in community service organizations. Ann is an officer in the Rancho Cucamonga's Emblem Club. "I love to be active. I like being involved with charity work," she said. Bob belongs to Rancho Cucamonga Elks, the Masonic Lodge and is active in other philanthropies.

The Casalettis celebrate every holiday, including the German Oktoberfest, at the polka palace with decorations and different holiday traditions.

One Christmas Eve tradition the Casalettis brought back is Bonia Caulda, vegetables and pieces of steak dipped in a sauce made with garlic, oil and anchovies.

"After eating Bonia Caulda on Christmas eve, you'd get to midnight mass and nobody would stand close to you. That is, unless they had had Bonia Caulda too," Bob said.

Word of mouth is how most polka dancers discover Casaletti's. "We've been coming here for 25 years because we like the music, the people and it's a very friendly place," Helen Vecchetti said.

"We live in Fontana and our neighbor told us and we've been coming here ever since," she said.

She and her husband Nello (Mike) recently celebrated their 33 wedding anniversary at Casaletti's.

"We come here to have fun and dance. We've never seen a fight here, the owner's real nice, the hardwood floor is nice to dance on and you can go and stomp your feet, do anything you want even if you don't know how to dance the polka," Nello said.

What brings Agnes and Walter Hodapp to Casaletti's 65 miles from their Long Beach home is the polka dancing, the smooth dance floor and good bands.

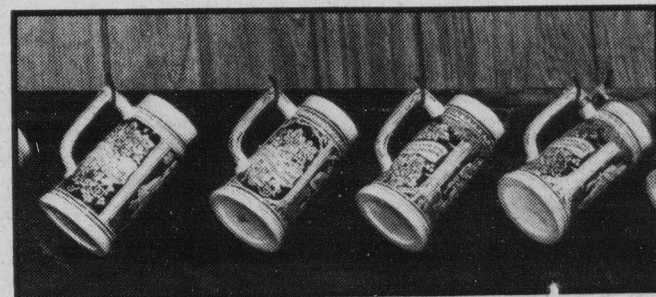

"We love to dance. We decide to come here when given a choice between bands. We could have gone to Orange County, only 27 miles from home compared to the 60 or 70 miles here but we choose to come here because of the band," Walter said.

Bill Guzel, band leader, is well known in the field of polka music. Guzel said he got his start at Casaletti's and played there four years consecutively. "I started making my name here. Since then I've played nationally and have sold records in Europe."

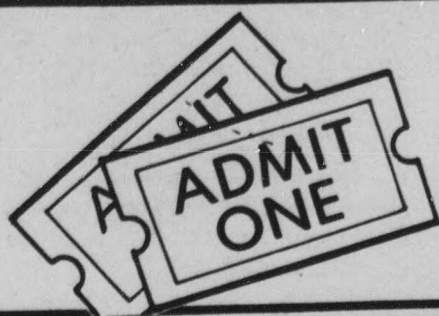

"On thing about Annie, she'll give new bands a chance. Ann and Robert are two of the finest people I know," he said.

"Polka music is the happiest music in the world. It has a happy sound and people enjoy themselves," Guzel said.

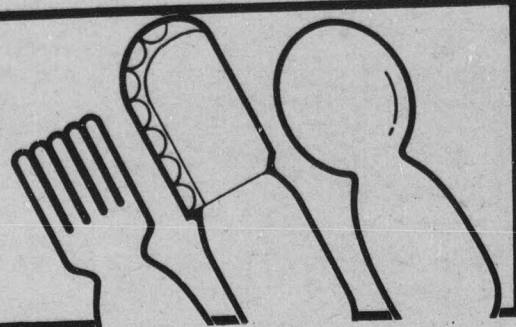

"Not all polka dancers are old; they're young, middle age, the music appeals to everybody," he said. □

Whether they are hopping, stomping or waltzing, (top) polka feet are happy feet. Customers at Casaletti's (middle) have been coming to dance to the polka band for more than 37 years. The polka palace will celebrate its 38 year in August. Bill Gysel, accordionist and band leader, (left) is a favorite of polka dancers. A beer stein collection (above) lends itself to the homey atmosphere found at the polka palace.

ENTERTAINMENT & DINING GUIDE

Hot Pecans makes a musical shift

By Terri Tirella

Take four men, mix with intelligence, humor and camaraderie; add a dash of craziness: That's the recipe for Hot Pecans, a popular West Valley group.

The Hot Pecans plays weekly at El Gato Gordo in Upland and is undergoing a transition in its music and its members. The group is moving from trio to quartet with two guitarists, bass and drums, said long-time member David Millard.

Musically, the Hot Pecans will move from its bluegrass sound to more '30s and '40s swing "and move on to a little early rock 'n' roll," he said. The group may also include a few more original songs in its repertoire.

"With original music, a band has to work up a following. If you play the top 40 hits you're (the band is) like a live musical jukebox, but you can always find work," Smokey Stober said. Stober plays bass with the revamped Hot Pecans. Guitarist Bruce Bishop and Roy Durnal, drummer, round out the group's new sound.

All members do vocals except Durnal. "They won't let me, as much as I want to," the drummer said, although he concedes he has "an incredibly rotten voice."

"The four of us have been playing together off and on for more than 10 years. We've crossed paths and experienced different playing styles and have learned things together," Bishop said.

Hot Pecans is a name the band members dragged out of moth balls, dusted off and decided to use. "A couple of us were in a band years ago that performed with Cindy Edward called "Cindy's Sweet Roll and Hot Pecans," Millard said.

Becoming the next Beatles or being on the cover of Time Magazine or Rolling Stone isn't a goal of the Hot Pecans. "We're down to earth (about goals). We have fun, play music and we'll see where it goes," Stober said.

"We set it up and it can go where it wants to go. The kind of music we play won't end up on the radio," he said.

Durnal is not an ordinary rock 'n' roll drummer. "I use a snare drum and symbol and stand up," he said, explaining that "there is historic precedent

(for that style): In the 1930s it was real common because of a lack of room. A lot of jazz bands used it."

He said El Gato Gordo's stage is "about as big as a doormat, and playing standing up is probably better for my back."

"As rock grew, drum sets grew too. We're going back to the bare essential drums, similar to what the Stray Cats and Devo drummers use," Durnal explained.

"We definitely have a minimum of electronic gadgetry. Not because we can't afford it but because we like it that way," Stober said. "Acoustically (without amplification) is warmer and the era of music we play dictates it."

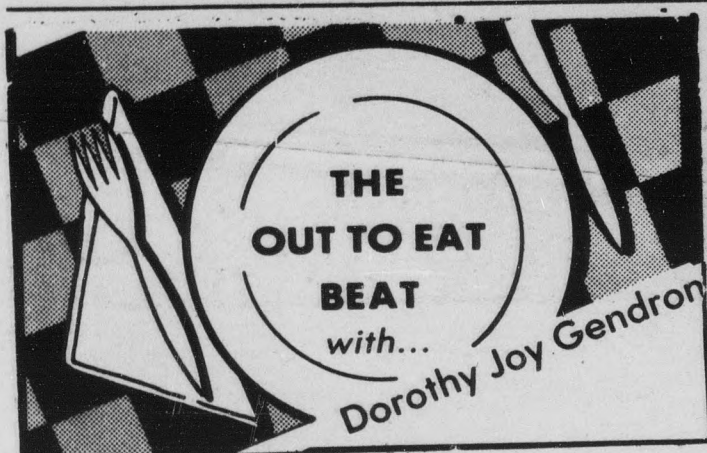

The band specializes in a wide variety of music and plays at parties, weddings, Rancho Cucamonga's Concerts in the Park and hope to play at Griswold's this spring.

Millard said Hot Pecans doesn't run into too much competition because of its different style.

"Bands who have work are fulfilling a need and are well-versed in what they play," Durnal said.

Band members said that playing in a bar five nights a week is not what they are striving for, because the group never knows whether it will be a good night or a bad one. "A good night in a bar is like a handshake in the dark," Bishop said, to the

Now that all things of Christmas have been lovingly stashed away for another year and the new year is firmly entrenched it's time to turn our thoughts to regular everyday events.

I have mentioned Kowloon Restaurant in this space before but really it bears mentioning again and again. Honest, it's that good.

The restaurant is tucked away in the Vanguard Center at 616 N. Mountain Ave. in Upland. Not being within easy view of the passing motorist you could very easily miss it. It would be worth your while to look for it; the food is extremely delicious and prepared with loving care.

Luncheon specials are served from 11:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Monday through Saturday. There are 18 different entrees to choose from. Some of the choices are: chicken with cashew nuts, beef with tomato sauce, beef or chicken with curry sauce, moo goo gai pan, Peking pork chop and many more delightful combinations. The entrees are served with soup of the day, egg roll and ham fried rice. For dessert you'll enjoy cookies and of course, piping hot Chinese tea.

The price for the special luncheon is most kind to pocketbooks of all sizes...$2.75! You can hardly ask for a better deal.

Dinners at Kowloon are equally delightful. The special combination dinners are called "Chef's High Lite" with prices ranging from $4.50 per person to $7.50. I must warn you in advance...go there when you're super hungry. The assortment of dishes will boggle your mind. It would be a great idea to take three or four friends, that way you'll have a chance to sample all the great dishes.

Since we're on the subject of Chinese cuisine, have you had the opportunity to drop in for either lunch or dinner at Wong's? Luncheon is served Monday through Friday from 11:30 till 3 p.m. (except holidays). You'll have your choice of the regular luncheon specials but if you're the adventurous type then you'll choose one of the "house specialties", go ahead what can you loose and you just might discover a dish that could become your very special favorite. Some of the choices include: Chinese style strips pork, spareribs with black bean sauce, scallop in hot plate, straw mushroom beef with baby corn or seafood in a hot plate and many other unique creations that you'll be sure to enjoy.

ENTERTAINMENT & DINING GUIDE

A nutty kind of job for the Hot Pecans

general agreement of his fellow band members.

"Playing rock 'n' roll night after night saps your creativity a bit. Playing the top 40 hits is a hard job. People relate the music as to whether or not what you played sounded like the record," Stober said.

When listening to Hot Pecans, the younger crowd hears songs it probably doesn't know "but older people always sing along with us," Millard said.

Working at El Gato Gordo Wednesday nights is fun for the Hot Pecans, Millard said. The band will bid farewell to fiddler Dave Broch Jan. 25, and anyone wearing Hot Pecan T-shirts will pay happy-hour prices all night. T-shirt wearers will enjoy the same prices at a "band-warming" Feb. 1.

Hot Pecans' new style will regale listeners with a Western-style swing, "an early '50s Spade Cooley style," said Millard, with Hot Pecans dressed in 1930s working class clothes featuring rolled-up sleeves and suspenders. "We try to make the look fit the music," he said.

Music is an avocation for the Hot Pecans. Millard is studying zoology at Chaffey; Durnal is studying economics at Pitzer College. Stober repairs guitar amplifiers with his "flex-time" Amplifier Man business. Bishop also does some instrument repair work.

Millard is a former guitar repairman. "You could back a car over a guitar and when you get it back it from David it would be brand new," Bishop said.

Maturity helps Hot Pecan members to realize striving for impossible goals can take the enjoyment of playing their music away from them. "We all went through that years ago. We have some long-term goals (in making their place in the music world) but not the frustration that sometimes accompanies them. We go day to day, playing music and having fun," Stober said. □

Brant Clinard

The newly restructured Hot Pecans will play Wednesday evenings at El Gato Gordo on Foothill Boulevard in Upland beginning Feb. 1. The group includes (l-r) David Millard, Roy Durnal, Jr.; Smokey Stover and Bruce Bishop.

SPORTS

After years of practicing and training, Pat Brault is near the top.

Brault's goal: skating gold

By Tom Vivian

Figure skating, both professional and amateur, isn't a sport found covered in sports pages on a daily basis.

Usually media coverage is limited to the Olympics, or a few other select international championships.

For the skaters themselves, however, the graceful sport makes constant and grueling demands on their bodies, stamina, and time.

Practice hours are long, and often conducted during the coldness of pre-dawn, and the competitions are intense events where a plethora of competitors vie for just three medals.

But to most, including Pat Brault of Upland, it's all worth it.

"It (the possible future payoff) makes up for it in the long run," Brault, 17, said about his sport's demands.

Originally from Lake Arrowhead, Brault said he's been involved in skating for five years, and his parents have been extremely supportive of the financially exhausting sport.

"We moved (to Upland) so I could get more skating time," he said. "Moneywise, they've been very supportive, and they've also had to put themselves out a lot."

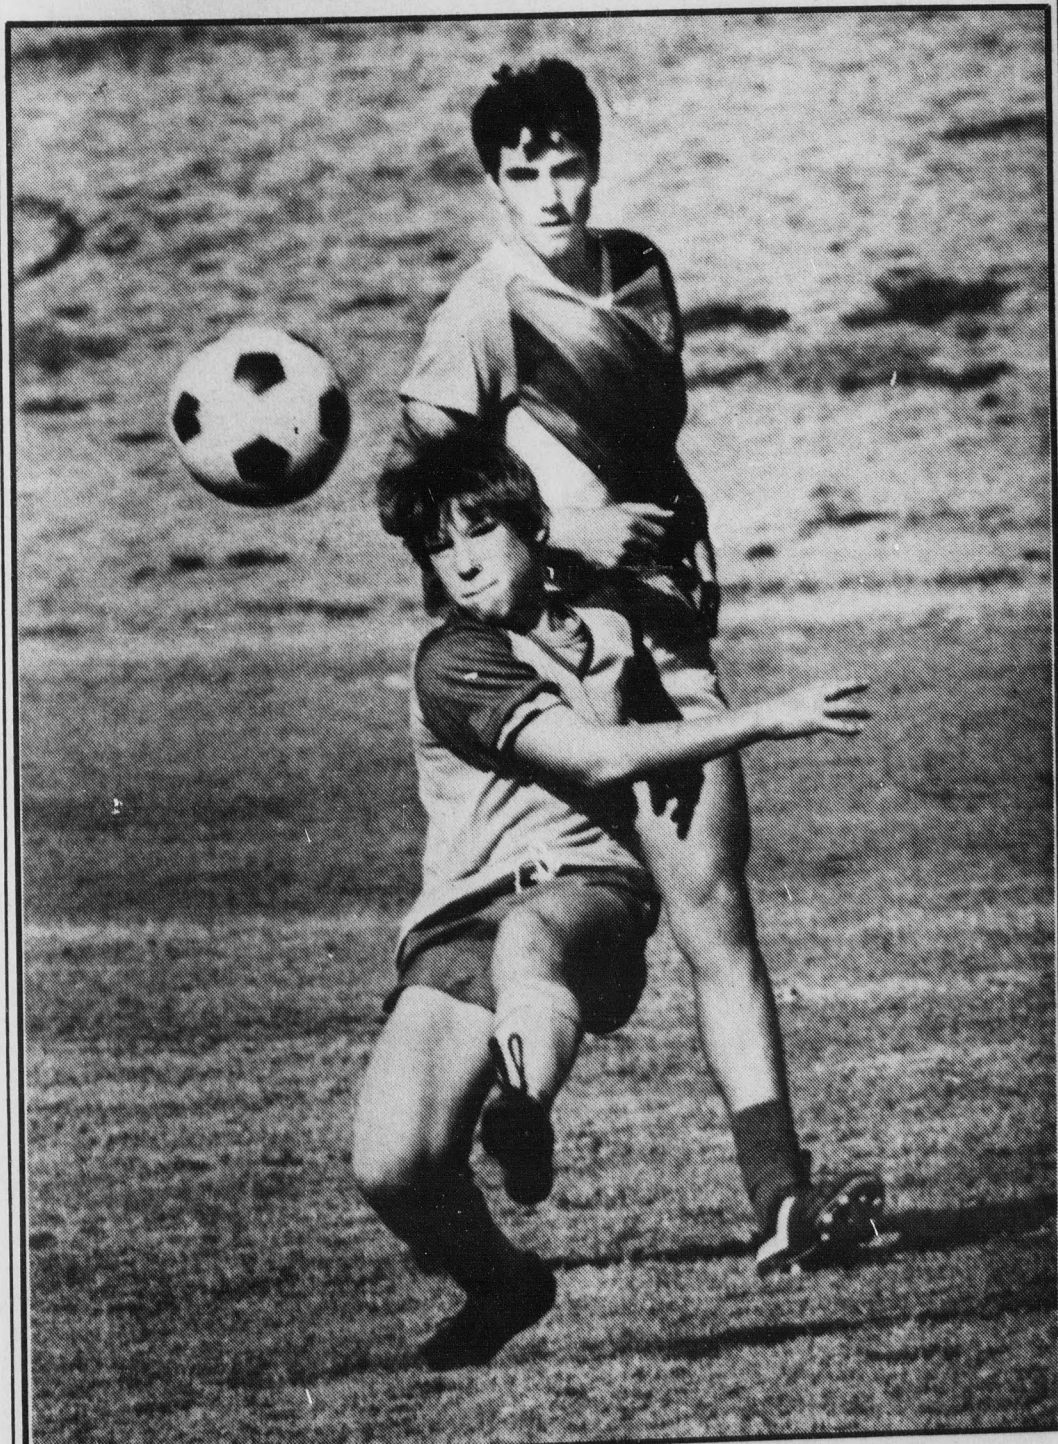

Brault is in Salt Lake City to compete in the United States Figure Skater's Association' national junior championships.

The novice and junior championships will be competed at the Bountiful Recreation Center. To get there, last month he placed first in the regionals held in Paramount, against skaters from California and Arizona.

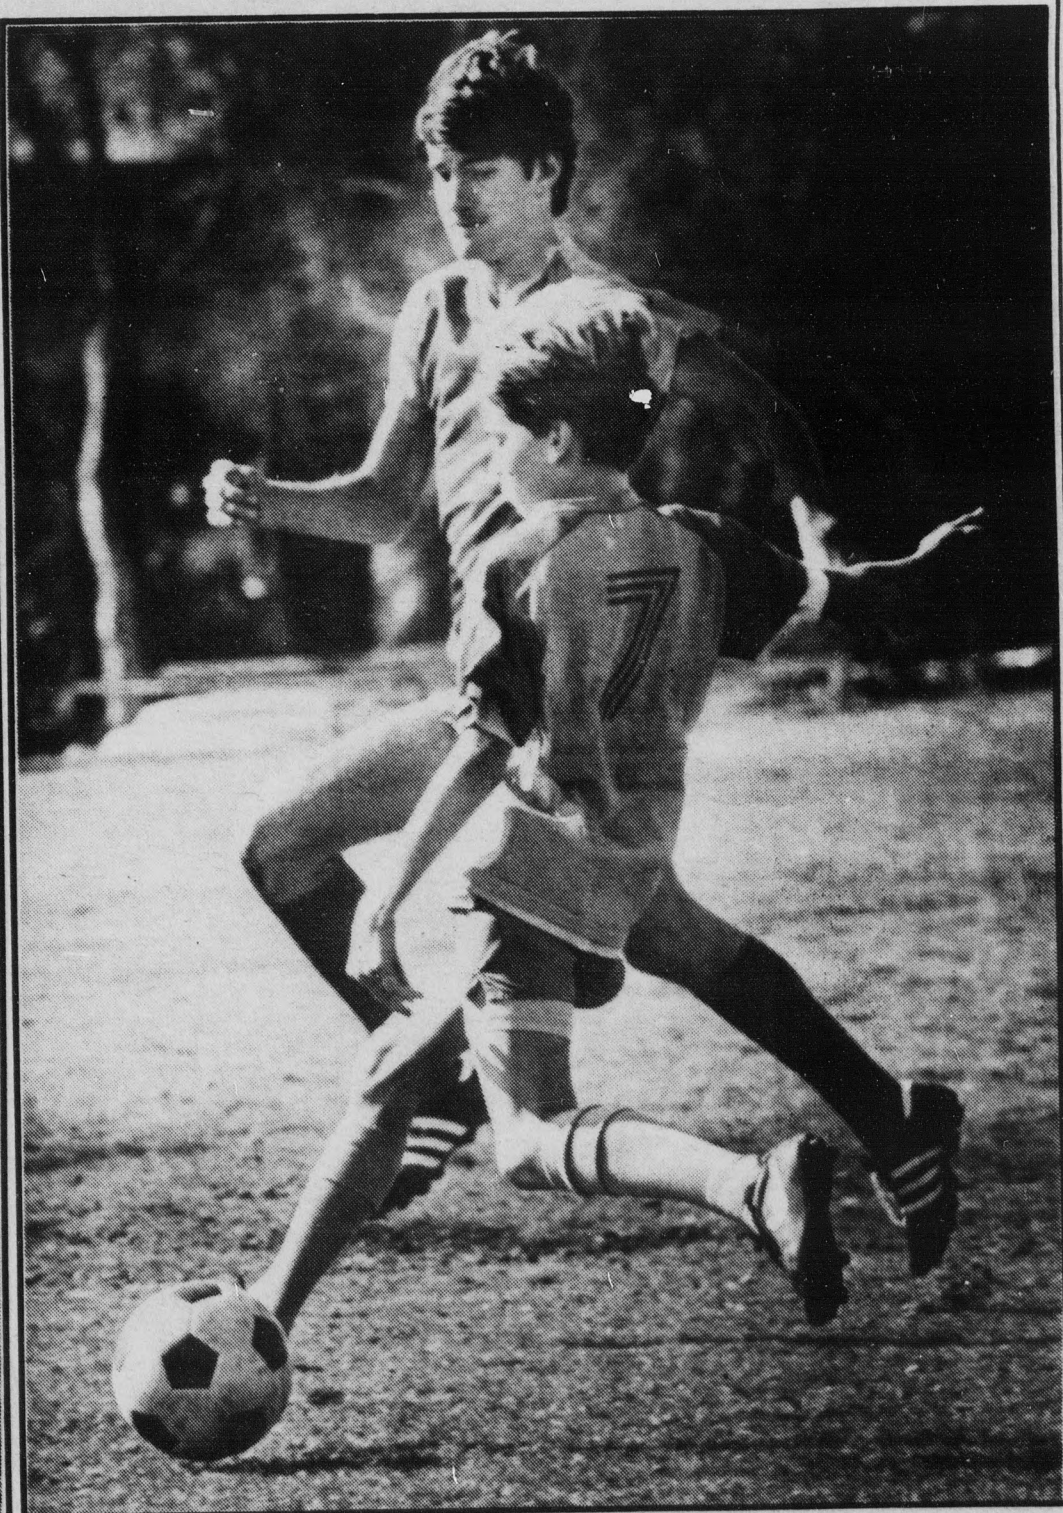

Don Bartelson, a former figure skater himself and one of the Ontario Skating Center's owners, serves as Brault's coach. He's been instructing Brault for nearly five years, and he said he's pleased with both the young skater's dedication and ability.

"He's a very, very, dedicated Off-road series goes national

An expanded race schedule, including two new indoor venues and a variety of technical innovations, will make up the 1984 Off-Road Championship Gran Prix Series, producer Mickey Thompson has announced.

Kickoff for the $500,000, five-race series is set for April 21 at Thompson's specially-designed closed-course at the Los Angeles County Fairgrounds in Pomona, home of the Off-Road Championship Gran Prix Series for the past two seasons.

Two additional dates are scheduled for the Pomona site, round two June 23 and the series finale on Aug. 25.

In the meantime, Thompson will take his show on the road outside of California for the first time. Indoor dates at the new Hoosier Dome in Indianapolis on July 14 and the Silverdome in Pontiac, Mich. on July 28 give the series its first national flavor.

"Off-road competition is no longer just a West Coast sport," Thompson added. "There are a lot of good competitors back there just itching to run this year's series, and most of them are more capable of holding their own against the California drivers. It should make for some interesting competition."

Thompson said the two venues at Indianapolis and Pontiac have required special planning and technical innovations in order to set up the individual courses.

Unlike the Pomona circuit, which is a man-made dirt course simulating the rugged terrain of the California and Mexican desert, both indoor sites will be set up utilizing the existing concrete and asphalt surfaces.

"The entire set-up is designed with spectator comfort and enjoyment in mind," Thompson said. "Like our track at Pomona, the Hoosier Dome and Silverdome courses will provide full audience viewing, completely dust free."

The 1984 Off-Road Championship Gran Prix Series will again feature competition in four separate classes including the popular Grand National (mini) Pick-Up Trucks, Formula 1 Unlimited Single Seaters, Super 1600s and the exciting three-wheeler ATV motorcycles.

Competition shall determine class championships in all four categories, based on a series-long point system, and all four champions from the 1983 series, including Ivan Stewart (Grand National pick-up truck), Bob Gordon (unlimited single seater), Mike Gillman (Super 1600) and Jimmy White (three-wheeler) are expected to defend their individual class titles.

One of the major highlights of the series again this year will be the separate Manufacturers' Cup Challenge, a battle among the pick-up manufacturers which draws direct participation and support from leading American and foreign truck makers.

Last year's Manufacturers' Cup was won by Toyota and driver Ivan Stewart after a series-long battle with Ford, Chevrolet, Dodge, Datsun and Mitsubishi.

The first turn at Pomona always creates havoc for single seat off-road racers.

Crisis to bring out best in radio group

"Sometimes when we can't get in with supplies, people from RACES have used their four-wheel drives and have taken supplies into shelters," Shellenbarger said. "We think they are terrific, especially with the work they did last year (in the floods)."

During the torrential rains, RACES used its volunteers to keep authorities apprised as to catch basin levels. "They delivered flares and kept an eye on flooded areas."

"We tell our people to stay calm, don't yell in the radio. Compose yourself, squeeze the button on the radio and talk calmly," Petrone said.

"I had a lot of calls during the winds (over New Year's weekend) asking if we were on standby. In the Midwest, they watch tornados, viewing it from a distance and tracking the storms," Petrone said.

RACES also provides disaster communications with families located in another state. "We have a traffic network where messages are relayed like the Pony Express," he said.

Messages from someone in Upland could be relayed to relatives in another state. "We have numbers for most messages. Like number 51 may mean 'I'm okay — I'll call you when I can,'" he said. Messages are then sent with addresses and telephone numbers from radio operator to radio operator until they reach the intended receiver.

RACES also provides communications during major events, including local parades, marathons, 5K and 10K runs or other community activities.

"We benefit a lot from the practice. We might be saying 'move this here' — maybe another time it could be medical supplies. When we say we need some electrical tape, maybe during a disaster we could be asking for blood," he said.

Anyone interested in RACES can call Petrone at 981-1836. □

Children's health, immunization clinics

Upland NEWS Thursday, January 19, 1984 27

Child health and immunization clinics are offered by the San Bernardino County Department of Public Health at various West Valley centers.

Services include complete physical examinations and immunizations for children from birth to age 6 and for children and youth of Medi-Cal families from birth to age 21. Immunizations only are available to all, from 2 months to 18 years of age.

The five centers offering the services are located in Upland, Chino, Ontario and Rancho Cucamonga.

The two Ontario centers include the West Valley

Health Department, 320 E. D St. and Bon View Community Center, 1010 Bon View Ave.

In Upland, Los Olivos Community Center, 1200 N. Campus Ave., serves the needs of that community while in Rancho Cucamonga the Neighborhood Center, 9791 E. Arrow Highway, does the job.

Physical exams are on an appointments-only basis and can be made for any of the centers by calling 628-2914.

Exams are free to children and youth ages 1 day old to 21 years of age who are from Medi-Cal families when a current POE (proof of eligibility) label is presented.

Exams are also free for children between 1 day and 6 years old from low-income families. A fee is charged for all other children up to 6 years old.

Immunizations are available on a walk-in basis to all children, accompanied by a parent or guardian. There will be a $2 fee per visit per child.

Immunization clinics are offered at the Ontario Health Department Mondays, 9 to 11:30 a.m.; Chino Health Subcenter, first and third Monday, 1:30 to 3:30 p.m.; and Rancho Cucamonga Neighborhood Center, second Monday of the month, 2 to 4 p.m.

For more information 988-1312.

SAVE ENERGY AND STILL FEEL WARM ALL OVER.

By using your head and maybe a sweater, you can save energy all winter.

Just make a few adjustments.

Start by setting your thermostat at 68° during the day, 55° at night. This will save you energy and money, too.

Create a nice warm spot.

The best way to use less heat is to heat less space. Close the doors and vents to rooms you don't use often. If you can keep family activities in one room, an economical small space heater may be all you need to keep warm and cozy.

Hold on to your heat.

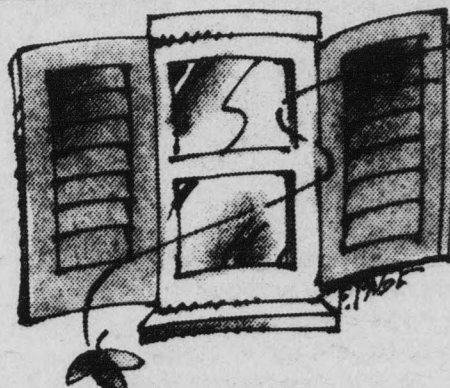

Once you get warmed up, don't let heat escape through the ceiling or through cracks, chimneys and window frames. Insulate. Caulk. Seal. And weather-strip. Close your drapes to hold the heat in on dark, gloomy days. Open them up to let the warmth of the sun shine in.

And to keep warm air from going straight up the chimney, close the damper when your fireplace is not in use.

Talk to us.

There's an Edison service representative waiting to talk with you about energy conservation. Call 1-800-952-5062 for answers, tips, and information.

Follow these helpful hints and you'll enjoy a warm, energy-saving winter.

LIBRARY NEWS

Do you really need to buy your child an encyclopedia?

By Pat Casteneda

Librarians are frequently asked by friends and patrons to recommend a good encyclopedia for home use. Usually the question comes from parents interested in purchasing a reference tool the kids can use for homework assignments.

Occasionally the question comes from someone who has been the recipient of a high-powered sales pitch from an encyclopedia sales person, and the questioner expresses confusion over what he has bought, its quality, and the fairness of its price. A young woman called me the other day who had just signed a contract to purchase an encyclopedia set.

After the sale she had figured out that by the time she paid interest charges, her encyclopedia and other items such as classic fiction titles, a dictionary and yearbooks, which come with the set, would amount to $1,800. This prompted her to check into just what she was getting for her money.

She called me to ask if her encyclopedia was a good one, and because the question isn't quite as simple as it sounds, our conversation became quite drawn out. I'd like to share some of the points we covered.

The first question one must ask is if one needs an encyclopedia at all. There are many reasons for not purchasing one. They are soon out of date, they are expensive, and they may or may not contain the information you are seeking at a given time.

If you are a library user, and you take the kids to the library often anyway, there is a lot to be said for using the library's resources which are up-to-date, include the major encyclopedias, and which range far beyond the coverage and depth of an encyclopedia set.

But most parents are too busy to cart the kids to the library every time they have an assignment, and they themselves are in need of a source of quick reference in the home, and they see the encyclopedia as an opportunity to teach beginning research skills to young scholars. These are compelling reasons for the purchase of a good set of encyclopedias.

The choice of which encyclopedia to purchase depends on how much money you can spend and who will be using the set. According to the "Encyclopedia Buying Guide," by Kenneth Kister, encyclopedias range in price from $70 to $1,000, but generally the cheaper sets have limitations in coverage and quality which render them less useful as reference tools. You will probably have to spend from $500 to $900 for a good encyclopedia which will fill most of your needs.

The crucial choice is at what grade and reading level should your purchase be made? This is a difficult decision because when you are spending so much money you want as many members of the family to be able to use the encyclopedia for as long as possible. But if the reading level is too difficult you risk losing your younger users, and if it's too low the set will be less useful to more advanced readers.

Once you have made your decision to spend the money, deciding who to aim your purchase at is the most important, and it will determine whether the interaction of your children with the encyclopedia is one of satisfaction or frustration. This choice cannot be made by an encyclopedia salesman, nor can it be made by a professional librarian, or even a teacher familiar with your child's skills. You may have several children and adults for whom you are making your choice and you, the parent, are the only one who can keep all their needs in mind. However, a professional librarian who uses many encyclopedias day after day with many different people at various reading levels can, at the very least, show you the various sets he/she uses and explain their strengths and weaknesses.

The book I mentioned, "Encyclopedia Buying Guide," is a most valuable source of information on encyclopedias and, considering the amount of money you're spending, it would be well worth your time to consult it. Actually, it contains more information than you'll ever want to know about encyclopedias, but you can browse through it and easily pick out what encyclopedias are available, their prices, the scope of their coverage, and the reading and grade levels for which they are most appropriate. This book also tells how to contact salespersons. It is a much better approach than determining your choice according to which salesman gets to you first.

By the way, the young woman who called me canceled her order and bought a 1963 vintage encyclopedia from her local Friends of the Library group for $10. She decided since her daughter was only 2, she could wait for a major purchase. In the meantime, they would find out how useful a set could be and teach basic reference skills using the old set.

and spends part of each year studying and lecturing in Europe and Japan.

Prior to the meeting, lunch will be served to members and their guests at Wilber Hall on the Scripps campus.
